

Sydney Cancer Conference 2021 Registration Support

Overview of the Sydney West Translational Cancer Research Centre

The Sydney West Translational Cancer Research Centre (SWTCRC) was established in 2011 with grant funding from the Cancer Institute NSW, and brings together over 400 expert clinicians and researchers in western Sydney to work together to accelerate the fight against cancer. The SW-TCRC devotes itself to removing barriers, and to support, groom and amplify the skills and achievements of our workforce so they can provide ever greater benefits to our local community.

The strategy of the SWTCRC aims to:

1. Provide activities and support that promote connections between talented people so they can unite in a common purpose.
2. Identify important new areas of research which have the potential to improve patient outcomes.
3. Develop new funding partnerships which not only increase resources for our people, but make our projects sustainable into the future.
4. Work closely with other like organisations around NSW to identify new findings, share ideas, and team up for mutual gain.

This combination of activities brings together our many clinical and research experts and our trainees, uniting them around common goals, and provides them with resources to do what they do best. By getting the best we can from our human and technical resources, we will maximise our impact on reducing the burden cancer causes to our community.

2021 Sydney Cancer Conference Registration Support

SCC2021 will be held on September 9-10, 2021 in a fully virtual format. The theme of the conference is “Bridging Research and Practice”. The program will feature all areas of cancer research – basic biomedical, public health, clinical and psychosocial – making the latest information and research available to researchers, clinicians, students, consumers and members of the public alike. Please visit Sydney Cancer Conference - Cancer Research Network for more information including speakers, key dates and how to submit an abstract.

The SWTCRC is offering financial support to cover the early bird or student registration cost for members who would like to attend this event.
